

DEATH VISITS YORK SPRINGS

PROMINENT MERCHANT DIES OF HEART FAILURE.

Henry Howard Hershey in Business For 39 Years in That Town.

Henry Howard Hershey, a prominent York Springs merchant, died on last Saturday afternoon at his home in York Springs, from heart failure, aged 72 years and 22 days. Mr. Hershey was born in Paradise township, York county, and about the time he had attained his majority, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hershey, moved to Tyrone township and built what has since been known as Hershey's Mill, along the Conewago Creek. Fifty years ago he was married to Miss Clara Virginia Homer. Mr. Hershey moved to York Springs 39 years ago and since that time had been prominently identified with the progress of the town. He was a pioneer in the restaurant business in York Springs and "Hershey's" has been a favorite eating place for two generations. It has also served as a club for many of the farmers of the community who assembled there and discussed the problems of their business. Always of a genial and optimistic disposition, he acquired a large circle of friends during his long, busy and useful life as farmer, miller and merchant. Funeral services were held Tuesday at the Latimore meeting house. Rev. Charles Baker, of East Berlin, officiated, and was assisted by Rev. D. B. Harlacher and Rev. William Smith. After calling for his aunt and receiving no response, he went to the front room on the lower floor which was used by Miss Timmins as a bedroom because of her invalid condition and found her lying on the floor there. She had been apparently as well as usual when last seen by anyone. Miss Timmins had been an invalid for years, but although requiring a wheeled chair whenever she went out, was able to walk about the house. It is supposed that she arose at an early hour to jar cherries and upon feeling ill started to walk toward her bed, on which she struck her head as she fell. Miss Timmins was a daughter of the late Charles and Mary Timmins, and resided in the old Timmins homestead. Her age was 74 years. ## THE REAL JOHN W. DAVIS WEDDING BELLS RING OUT

NEAR UP VIEW OF THE MAN ROBBIN B. WOLF, A GETTYSBURG BOY, MARRIED.

Words of Highest Praise From The London Times When He Left For Home.

The more and better acquainted Democrats and Americans become with John W. Davis, Democratic candidate for President, the more will they realize that in brain power, character and all that makes up manhood he is first class, of the best. There is nothing second class about him.

While the war was going Walter H. Page represented United States at the court of St. James. He won England and was looked upon as a wonder, which his recent letters have established. No man ever had a harder job than to follow Page as Ambassador to England. When John W. Davis proved himself more than equal to the job and started home the great London Times gave him the following send-off:

"America never has had at the Court of St. James's an Ambassador more beloved by his compatriots in London than is the Hon. John William Davis, who, after two years and a quarter of brilliant service, shortly will return to the United States to resume his private law practice.

"As Americans love him, so I venture to think, do many Englishmen love him, and for the same reason. They love him because his head is right and his heart is right. They love him because, in a world over-full of folly and uncharity, he stands out as a consistent, witty, and charming pleader for sanity and good-will among men.

"He imagines he is going back to the United States to lose himself in his law books. I venture to predict he is mistaken. I doubt if he can be spared from the public life of America. It needs his character, his sympathy, humor, his eloquence. He already has made great material sacrifices for his country—any poor man in America must. But I fancy he will make more, for his ears are sharp to the call of service, and all the world is in sore need of the service of such men.

"Americans in London have been impressed particularly by Mr. Davis's educational efforts in this country. Realizing, as do they all, that Britain and America are amazingly ignorant of each other, the Ambassador has done everything in his power to further the campaign of international enlightenment.

"Another of Mr. Davis's achievements in London has won the hearty approval of his fellow-Americans here. He has brought the American Embassy up to a remarkable degree of efficiency. There probably is not a better organized diplomatic establishment in the world. Its system is the result of two things—(1) Mr. Davis's acute and methodical mind, and (2) his faculty of winning the admiration and loyalty of his staff from top to bottom.

Not a "Secret" Diplomatist.

"John William Davis is a statesman who is not afraid of newspaper men. He talks with them regularly. He answers their questions honestly and intelligently and with all the frankness compatible with his duty. He has an idea—a sound idea, one would think—that statesmen and journalists should work together for the benefit of the world. Journalists are inquisitive, observant, worldly, not slow to recognize feebleness and humbug. Some statesmen do not like them. But Mr. Davis likes them, and they like him, and they like him the more for their close knowledge of him. His substance, his quality, his mental worth are of that sort which, after the most critical scrutiny, come off securely triumphant.

"His best speech in London was one he never delivered. The Prince of Wales had spoken at the Mansion House lunch after his return from Canada. The quality of the speech had surprised, delighted and moved his audience. Mr. Davis was to speak after him, and had obviously prepared a fitting oration. But he felt that any oration must be an anti-climax after the Prince's words. So he uttered a few easy, sincere and dignified sentences—and sat down amid applause more hearty than the most eloquent period could have earned."

J. L. BUTT'S STATEMENT

As To Matter Under Investigation By Board of Censors of Bar Association

At the meeting of the Committee of Censors of the Adams County Bar Association appointed by the Court, held on last Friday, J. L. Butt submitted the following statement of matter under investigation:

"I have not seen the court's order, but I understand the court has indicated that there was more of this judgment assigned than there was really offered. I want to state to you, gentlemen, the record as I understand it. This judgment was originally entered in the name of Maria S. Harish, George F. Smith, guardian, and Raymond E. Deardorff in the sum of $1800. $600 belonged to Maria Harish, George F. Smith, guardian, $800 and Raymond E. Deardorff $400, that made $1800.00.

Other Weddings.

Wolf-Burgan.—Robbin Bayard Wolf, Esq., and Miss Hughanna Jane Burgan, were married in Shady-side Presbyterian Church, Pittsburgh, on Saturday evening, July 12th, by Rev. Dr. W. D. Irons, of McDonald, who had united in marriage the bride's father and mother. He was assisted by Rev. Dr. Alonzo Turkle, pastor of the Trinity Lutheran Church of the North Side. The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Sterling Burgan, was gowned in ivory Diana combined with chiffon and embroidered in pearls. The court train had a yoke of rose point lace, and her tulle veil was held in place with a coronet of the lace and orange blossoms. The bridal bouquet was lilies of the valley touched with Prenet roses and delphinium. A color scheme of blue and yellow was carried out in the gowns and flowers of the attendants. They included Mrs. Roberta Wolf Buehler, of Lakeville, Conn.; Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Buehler, of Williamstown, Mass.; Mrs. Warren J. Hoysradt, of Bronxville, N. Y.; Mr. and Mrs. John D. It is understood that while at the seashore Miss Weaver met Mr. Laird and the two came to Harrisburg and were married. The bride attended St. Francis Xavier school here. with hat and shoes to correspond. Following a honeymoon trip to Atlantic City, Wilmington and other eastern points, the couple will return to reside with the bride's parents in Biglerville.

Hoover-Trimmer.—Miss Helen Trimmer and Melvin Hoover, both of East Berlin, were married by Rev. Earl J. Bowman, pastor of St. James Lutheran church at the parsonage. They were unattended. Mr. and Mrs. Hoover will reside in East Berlin.

Beautiful and Unique Book.
A book, most beautiful and unique, has just been completed by Earl W. Stallsmith, East Middle street. Mr. Stallsmith, who is a member of the Majestic Club of Gettysburg, took a number of photographs of the Majestic Club Camp at Charlton, Maryland, last summer. He has finished and tinted all of the pictures, which number about fifty, and has had them bound in an attractive volume. His selection of subjects shows a fine sense of the artistic in photography and the tinting is unquestionably of the best. Probably the most unique is a night picture of the camp, while a real moonlight picture with 153 minutes' exposure, is one of the most interesting. This is the most elaborate piece of work Mr. Stallsmith has yet done and it speaks in no uncertain terms of his talent and ability.

Firemen's Annual Picnic.

The Adams County Firemen's Association will hold their third annual convention at East Berlin on Labor Day and the picnic at the Farmers' picnic grove near East Berlin. Sixteen fire companies, with 700 members now compose the association, the new companies to join being the Reaser Fire Company here with 53 members, the Abottstown Fire Company with 28 members and the Aspers Fire Company with 40 members, with Jas. B. Aumen president, who has worked hard since its formation to establish this organization on a permanent foundation. The wonderful service it has been giving throughout the county has firmly established it in the affections and estimation of the people of the county.

A resolution will come before the East Berlin convention for decision which will tend to bind the association in the closest of bonds. This is to make the Adams County Firemen's Association a beneficial organization, paying $50 at death.

No Plans For Increased Taxation.

The Compiler is informed that the County Commissioners have no plans whatever to increase the borrowing capacity of the county and the bonded indebtedness thereof. The matter has not received any official action of any kind whatever. The present board realizes that they have received as a legacy from the preceding Republican Board a debt of $265,000, and that it is going to take management and economy to pull through. They appreciate the fact that the taxes of farmers were never heavier than they are at the present time. There may be those who solve problems with prospective guesses but the situation according to our information is that there will be no increase of the burdens unless there is no escape therefrom and nothing will be left undone to prevent it.

Young Man Injured at Saw Mill.

Flint Dick, aged 16, while helping at the saw mill of Martin Boyer, in Butler township, last Saturday, was seriously injured. He was helping to guide a log through the circular saw when in some manner he was thrown against the saw, and his right hip was cut deeply and his right foot lacerated. He is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Dick and was rushed to the Annie M. Warner Hospital, where it is said that notwithstanding the injury to the hip, it is hoped to save the right leg.

World War Tragedies.

"Thousands of tragedies arising out of the World War were brought to light by the passage of the Adjusted Compensation Law," recently declared an official at the National Headquarters of the American Legion.

"I refer to those tragedies involved where veterans have chosen to disappear since returning safely from France, rather than to carry back to the old associations, their disappointed hopes, their restless spirits, their disgraced bodies. The compensation law reveals the cases of thousands of such 'missing' men whose families cannot collect their compensation benefits under the ruling which states that dependents of veterans must submit with their application a certificate of the veteran's death."

"The official records in the Army and Navy Departments report these men as 'missing.' Records are not discerning. Most of the veterans listed as 'missing' are as dead to their families and old associations, as if their bodies lay unidentified in France."

"Somewhere the flesh of these missing men still lives, it is true, but their spirit is broken or has taken hopeless flight like a bird with a broken wing, fluttering frightened from one gray obscurity to the next, there to hide, hurt and quivering, hoping that man will not step on it, nor injure it further while it awaits for death as a relief. But the Government compensates only on a death certificate. Broken and crushed spirits are not compensative."

"Take just one case that comes to mind. In the belated days of 1917, a young girl said goodbye and gave a promise of faithfulness to a handsome boy. The ensuing years were not uncommon: France, St. Mihiel, a piece of whining shrapnel, a mangled clot of blood and tissue; then the return home with all that was left of the pleasing features smashed and horrible and not less horrible when pieced together by the clumsy hands of man. The girl had been faithful. Then the meeting, and the soldier's twisted visage that contorted into a hideous leering grimace when it had meant to smile the tenderness in the boy's heart; then the girl's involuntary reversion from that loathsome thing. The man noted the horror reflected in the girl's eyes—and the averted face. He hastily mumbled goodbye as he stumbled through the garden. The boy has never returned."

"On the records of the war department that boy is listed as 'missing.' As a missing veteran his compensation cannot be paid to his people until he is proven dead, or unless he returns to claim it. He will never return to face the constant pity and sympathy of those he had loved. His case is similar to the tragedies of thousands of other veterans, singled with the brand of war in one form or another, and who will in all probability wander until the end, mavericks."

ARENDTSTVILLE.

There is no complaint of the potato bugs marring the crop thus far.

The farmers are busy cutting their grain and making hay. Owing to the frequent rains during the past week the grass crop is heavy and the prospect is for a good oats crop.

DAVIS AND BRYAN TICKET NAMED BY DEMOCRATS

Nomination Came on Sixteenth Day of What Had Been Most Bitterly Fought Convention in American Political History.

SUDDEN CLIMAX REACHED ON THE 103RD BALLOT

Immediately After Chairman Walsh Declared John W. Davis the Nominee a Tumultuous Convention Gave the West Virginian an Ovation Lasting Twenty Minutes—Big Outburst of Oratory Precedes Selection of Vice Presidential Candidate.

Convention Hall, New York.—After a convention battle unprecedented in its stubbornness and its length, the Democratic party presents to the voters of the United States the ticket that heads this column.

The nomination of Mr. Davis was accomplished on the 103rd ballot, when the convention had been in session 16 days all but five of which had been spent in trying to select a man to head the ticket.

Day after day, night after night, the deadlock continued unbroken, with McAdoo leading and Smith a persistent second. They and their managers were determined, not to say obstinate, and repeated efforts to persuade them to quit and thus to bring about the nomination of a compromise candidate were frustrated. The religious issue, which was forced upon the convention in a fight over the anti-Klan plank in the platform played its part, and a big part, in keeping the delegates from getting together. Indeed, it must be admitted that the struggle between the Klan element and the Catholic contingent dominated the proceedings of the convention. Everyone deplored the introduction of such an issue into American national politics but no one could deny that it had been introduced.

When the Fourth Came

Independence Day came and found the delegates still in session, weary eyed, almost apathetic, but immovable. Not all immovable, to be sure, for by that time many were running short of both money and patience and several hundred delegates and alternates left for home on July 3. Some of these deserters were recalled by telegraph and steps were taken to finance those who were "going broke."

The Fourth of July session opened with "The Star Spangled Banner," and every candidate's banner continued to wave. Augustus Thomas read the Declaration of Independence, and almost every delegate seemed confirmed in the opinion that his life and liberty depended on his voting as he had voted and that therein lay his pursuit of happiness. Through ballot after ballot the count displayed the same deadly monotony. Then Tom Taggart created a diversion by reading a telegram from Senator Ralston withdrawing from the race—at least for the time being. Indiana thereupon gave McAdoo 20 of her votes and Smith 10. During the 65th ballot came a telegram from James M. Cox turning loose the Ohio delegation. So the Buckeyes gave their 48 votes to Newton D. Baker, which didn't seem to help matters, since scarcely anyone else took the hint.

Friday evening the Smith forces brought forward two propositions, one that the candidates be invited to address the convention in executive session, the other that Smith, as Governor of New York, be asked to come in and talk half an hour. Both were defeated by the McAdooites, a two-thirds vote being required. The same fate met various attempts, on Friday and Saturday, to cut off the low candidate on each successive ballot. One delegate moved that the convention adjourn to meet in Kansas City on July 21, but received little support. Ohio dropped Baker Saturday and Smith's vote crawled slowly toward the 400 mark, while McAdoo's totals slowly declined. After the seventieth ballot almost the only persons who paid attention to the roll call were the women in the California and Texas delegations who mechanically waved colored bandannas every time a vote for McAdoo was recorded.

Late Saturday afternoon, when despair and disgust had seized upon all, that master politician, Tom Taggart, stepped to the rostrum and presented the first plan that seemed to offer a chance to settle the convention's trouble. This was that the chairman of the national committee and of the convention be authorized to call the representatives of the candidates into a conference for the purpose of arriving at a compromise agreement. With a glad shout the delegates approved of this scheme, and the convention was adjourned until 11 o'clock Monday morning.

JOHN W. DAVIS
OF WEST VIRGINIA
Democratic Candidate for President.

The candidates of the Democratic party stand upon a platform which reaffirms the party's adherence and devotion to the cardinal principles of freedom of religion, freedom of speech and freedom of the press, but does not denounce the Ku Klux Klan by name; which declares the ideals of world peace, the League of Nations and the world court constitute the supreme effort of the statesmanship and religious conviction of our time to organize the world for peace, but which aims to lift the League question out of politics by proposing a referendum on the question of American membership. Save these two, all the disputes over planks were settled in the Committee on Resolutions, but on these matters the contending factions were so determined that the fight was carried to the floor of the convention, where it raged from 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon until 2 o'clock Sunday morning. Throughout these long hours the throng that filled the Madison Square Garden to the roof remained in excited attention, and to restrain its possible over-enthusiasm about one thousand policemen stood shoulder to shoulder in a solid ring between spectators and delegates and massed themselves at the entrances.

Chief Incidents Day by Day

Perhaps as good a way as any to tell of this convention is to relate its chief incidents day by day. Of course Senator Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, was the important figure on Tuesday, since he, one of Democracy's leading orators, was temporary chairman. Following the usual preliminaries and the beautiful singing of "The Star Spangled Banner" by Anna Case, while thousands of tiny silk flags fluttered down from the rafters, Senator Harrison was installed and proceeded to deliver his long keynote speech. It was to be expected that he would exhort the Republican party, and so he did. But somehow he did not arouse either the delegates or the galleries so much as one would have thought he might. Perhaps it was the heat.

On Wednesday, to prove that the women were being given their share of the work Chairman Harrison introduced Mrs. Leroy Springs, of South Carolina, chairman of the Committee on Credentials. Handsome, calm and cool in white silk, she took the platform, waved greetings to cheering friends and read her report in a fine, clear voice. Then the star of that day, Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana, was presented to the convention as its permanent chairman. "He is a real Democrat and the greatest investigator this country has ever known," said Senator Harrison, and the crowd howled its approval. And again the state standards danced about the aisles and were massed in front of the rostrum, for here was the man who had done more than any other to supply campaign material for his party this year and whom that party gives credit for having done great service for the nation. Walsh is known as one of the best speakers in the senate, and his address was well written and vigorously delivered, though again the heat served to lessen its effect with the audience. Not so sharply perhaps, as Harrison, but quite as effectively, he too set forth at length what his fellow Democrats consider the delinquencies of the Republican majority in congress and the Republican administration.

Roll Call of States

More formal business, including a resolution of thanks to "Our Pat," the temporary chairman, and then came the roll call of states for presentation of candidates. "Alabama," cried the clerk, and Alabama responded in the person of Porney Johnston, a business-like, snappy looking gentleman who, in a business-like and snappy speech told the delegates why Senator Oscar Underwood was their ideal candidate. To him fell the honor of arousing the convention to the first really spontaneous demonstration so far. (That word "demonstration" is overworked, but it is the only one that fits.) Mr. Johnston said Mr. Underwood had asked him to place before the convention his views on a certain matter in unmistakable language. He did so, and when he named the Ku Klux Klan—the first outspoken mention of the organization—about half the delegates leaped to their feet with a wild war whoop that indicated they shared enthusiastically in the Alabamian's condemnatory attitude toward the "invisible government." The shouting ran like wildfire through the hall and one after another state standards were wreathed from their sockets and carried into the procession that quickly formed. Not all of them, by any means, and there were bitter struggles over some that did get into the parade. Most of the New England, northern and western states followed Alabama and New York into the anti-Klan demonstration. As a general thing the strong McAdoo delegations kept their seats and held their standards fast. Not until the band leader, showing unwonted tact, started up "America," which all could join in with good grace, was the tumult in the convention calmed. Characteristically, those in the hall who belonged to or sympathized with the Klan had sat silent under the jeering cries of "Kleagle" directed at them.

Senator Joseph T. Robinson, of Arkansas, having been put in nomination by former Governor Brough, briefly, neatly and with little resulting fuss, the clerk called:

McAdoo's Name Presented

For this the McAdoo forces had been waiting on the edges of their chairs and to the accompaniment of wild cheering a forest of California flags, bearing the bear, sprang up where the McAdoo delegates were thickest, and smaller clumps wherever in the crowd were a few votes the Californian had corralled. To the front of the platform stepped former Senator Phelan, looking like a page from the history of twenty-five years ago, and presented at great length the claims of his candidate. Laying stress on McAdoo's record of good service rendered his country and the fact that he shared in the work and ideals of Woodrow Wilson, Mr. Phelan did his level best. His speech was full of good things, but he couldn't hold the attention of the overheated audience. Men and women wandered through the aisles and those who remained in their seats chatted with their neighbors until the hall was filled with a murmur that must have been rather dismaying to the speaker. However, he had the satisfaction of knowing that he was being listened to by hundreds of thousands of radio addicts throughout the country. Chairman Walsh finally grew angry and told the audience what he thought of their discourtesy, and then they relapsed into quietude for a few moments.

Even the McAdoo enthusiasts were glad to have Senator Phelan arrive at the culmination of his address, for it gave them a chance to "bust loose." They wanted to show the Smithites and all the others how numerous and how determined they were. California naturally led the dance, her men and women bedecked with gay colored handkerchiefs. In the van was carried a pretty young girl dressed as "Miss Columbia," and following her was a quartet of white robed angels playing trumpets. Texas, Pennsylvania and a dozen other states helped out with the procession, and whenever the enthusiasm seemed to be dying down, the devices familiar to all who have seen such affairs served to revive it. Miss Columbia and the trumpeters, hot but tireless, were hoisted to the platform, and for just one hour they kept the demonstration going. All this time Mrs. McAdoo, laughing excitedly, stood in a box and looked down on the shouting delegates who hoped to put her husband in the White House.

Al Smith's adherents now succeeded in bringing about adjournment until Thursday morning, and they spent the interval in perfecting the details of a demonstration that they intended should be more spectacular and longer than that for McAdoo.

Woman Wields Gavel

When the convention was called to order next day they were all ready. Beside Chairman Walsh sat a lady in white who proved to be Miss May Kennedy, the permanent vice chairman. She was given the gavel after the invocation, and after a few pleasant words about the recognition accorded the women, she ordered that the roll call of the states be resumed. Governor Sweet of Colorado was first to arise, his intention being to second the nomination of Mr. McAdoo. But the Smith throng, which by this time had filled up all the available space in the hall, was impatient and rude. Shouts of "Oil!" arose from all the galleries and even from the floor and grew so numerous and loud that the speaker was unable to continue. Here Chairman Walsh again came to the front with a scathing rebuke to the hecklers that silenced them.

Smith Demonstration Thrilling

"Connecticut yields to New York," said a delegate from the Nutmeg state a few moments later, and instantly there was tumultuous cheering and wild waving of a myriad flags. But the demonstration was premature and Franklin D. Roosevelt, on crutches, mounding the rostrum and quieted it so that he might place in nomination New York's beloved governor, Al Smith. To the unbiased listener, Mr. Roosevelt's speech was the most satisfactory that had been made up to that time. His enunciation was perfect, his sentences clean cut. The vast audience hung upon his every word. It was a highly effervescent audience, surcharged with enthusiasm, and few speakers could have kept it from restraint as well as did the gentle man from New York. When he had set forth eloquently the virtues and qualities of Governor Smith which he believed made him the best man to head the Democratic ticket, Mr. Roosevelt gave "Al's" admirers their way, and they went to it with a will. This time the parade was led by a smudge-faced ragged little newsboy, and though he was obviously frightened, he did his duty as well as had "Miss Columbia" and like her was perched upon the rostrum. From the balconies and lobbies of the Garden swarms of Smith shouters won their way past the doorkeepers and the police and joined the Smith delegates in their march. A score of big banner portraits of the governor were unfurled on the floor, and everyone had a flag. The din was terrific being augmented by the entire fire alarm system of the building. Outside the building, where an immense crowd had assembled, the demonstration was almost as notable. Every automobile horn booted its until one hour and a half had passed.

Before this episode, Willard Saulsbury of Delaware, was put in nomination by Senator Bayard, and David F. Houston, former secretary of agriculture and secretary of the treasury, was offered by Lewis C. Stevenson, of Illinois, son of former Vice President Adlai E. Stevenson. Senator Ralston, of Indiana, was nominate, with commendable brevity, and before the session closed these names had been presented: Senator Ferris, of Michigan; Governor Ritchie, of Maryland; and Gov. Jonathan M. Davis, of Kansas. Next to the Smith demonstration, the most enthusiastic was for Ritchie.

Now it was almost dinner time, and the secretary read an announcement from the Committee on Resolutions that it would not be ready to report before Friday morning. A motion to take a recess and hold an evening session brought on a controversy. New York strenuously objected because the municipality had planned evening entertainments for the visitors. Adjournment until the next morning was proposed as an amendment and for the first time it was necessary to poll the convention. The vote was very close—559 to 513—but those who preferred entertainment to business in the evening won out.

Nominations Completed

More than six hours were devoted on Friday to completing the list of presidential nominations and to seconding speeches, of which there were many. The additional names presented to the convention were: James Cox, of Ohio; Gov. Charles W. Bryan, of Nebraska; Gov. Fred W. Brown, of New Hampshire; Gov. George S. Sizler, of New Jersey; Senator Carter Glass, of Virginia, and John W. Davis, of West Virginia. This made sixteen in all, and of course there were in addition a lot of dark horses and favorite sons who were not formally placed in nomination. During the seconding speeches there was a lot of howling from the gallery gods, who were tired of hearing talk and wanted action. Once the obnoxious fire sirens were started again, but Chairman Walsh announced that if their use was not stopped he would have them removed from the building.

Saturday afternoon the worn out, hollow eyed Committee on Resolutions brought in the platform in the building of which it had been engaged, day and night, throughout the week. Chairman Homer Cummings told of the vain efforts to settle the Klan and League of Nations disputes without putting them up to the convention, saying that at the final session of the committee so sincere were the desires of its members that one of them recited the Lord's Prayer, and William Jennings Bryan, chairman of the subcommittee, asked Divine help.

Newton D. Baker, of Ohio, proposer of the minority resolution on the League, staggered to the speaker's desk, so weary he could scarcely stand, and delivered himself of the one great burst of real emotional oratory heard by the convention. In impassioned accents, with fervid, hoarse, often broken voice, he pleaded with the Democrats not to abandon the ideals of Woodrow Wilson but to stand firm in advocacy of immediate American membership in the League of Nations. It was a truly magnificent effort and as Mr. Baker was assisted to his seat the thousands in the hall gave him a real ovation. In the minds loudest and every man and woman yelled for Al. A snowstorm of paper confetti descended from the upper windows of all buildings and whitened the streets for many squares. Since the McAdoo demonstrators had demonstrated for one hour, it was incumbent on the Smith boomers to keep it up for more than sixty minutes. They did so, order not being restored of all was the "Cross of Gold" speech that once made Bryan the nominee of the party.

Senator Key Pittman of Nevada replied for the majority of the committee, and though he was booed for a sarcastic allusion to Mr. Baker's emotionalism, his arguments prevailed, the committee's plank winning by a vote of 742½ to 353½.

Now came the battle over the Klan plank, to witness which most of the vast audience had sat through weary hours. The opening shot was fired by Senator Owen, of Oklahoma, in behalf of the majority report, and was well directed. W. R. Pattangall, of Maine, author of the proposed amendment explicitly naming the Klan, replied with equal effect. Several minor guns on either side were discharged, and then Bainbridge Colby, the big piece of ordinance in the anti-Klan forces, was turned loose. The former secretary of state made a corking good speech and aroused great enthusiasm. He was followed by William Jennings Bryan, who sought to pour oil on the troubled waters, but was a determined opponent of the plank in which the Klan was named. Mr. Bryan was heard respectfully by the delegates, but was booed several times by the audience.

The taking of the vote was long drawn out and tedious. Finally, at 2 o'clock in the morning, the chair announced that the majority report had won by a margin of just four votes. Then the weary delegates returned to their hotels.

Saturday night and all day Sunday the harmony committee labored, but to its most promising plans Mr. McAdoo dissented. The failure to reach an agreement was reported to the convention Monday and the weary round of balloting was resumed. After the eighty-second ballot a resolution was adopted releasing all delegates from all pledges and instructions so far as lay in the power of the convention. McAdoo's strength already was dwindling and on the eighty-fifth ballot he was below Smith for the first time.

At the opening of the Tuesday night session the convention was told by Franklin Roosevelt that Smith would withdraw immediately after such action by McAdoo. The reply to this was an increase of the McAdoo vote to well over 400. Ralston was tried out but after his vote had reached about 200 he definitely withdrew.

Century Ballot Taken

Ninety-nine ballots had been taken when McAdoo sent to Chairman Walsh a message saying he was loth to abandon his friends by quitting the contest but was now willing that they should act as their judgment dictated. All motions to adjourn had been defeated, and the century ballot was taken. McAdoo fell to 190.

Just then W. J. Bryan showed signs of wishing to address the convention again, so at 4 o'clock in the morning the delegates hurriedly adjourned for eight hours and staggered to their hotels.

The one hundred and first ballot Wednesday noon showed both Smith and McAdoo fast fading out of the picture and John W. Davis zooming up over 300. Underwood, with the support of New York, was a good second, and Meredith showed up well. Senator Walsh, who wasn't eager for the nomination received a respectable vote. Here was the making of another deadlock, with 3 or 4 to 1.

Davis Named by Acclamation
Despite the missionary trips of Mr. Bryan through the delegations, the vote for Davis mounted rapidly during the next two ballots. State after state climbed into the band wagon. Voice changes came so fast before the close of the 103rd ballot that none could keep track of them. So, with a glad shout, the convention nominated John W. Davis by acclamation and brought to an end this most extraordinary political struggle.

When the marching, singing cheering throng had been quieted Mr. Daniels moved for adjournment to 8:30 to give time for careful consideration of the choice for second place. There was a storm of shouts of "Walsh! Walsh!" but the chairman, not wishing the nomination that way, if at all, declared the session adjourned.

Father Knickerbocker was as proud as a peacock when the convention was awarded to him, and he set out to show the other convention cities how to take care of such a gathering. The result was astonishing to every veteran convention attendant. Prominent men and women turned to with a will and seconded the efforts of the press and the city officials, and most elaborate plans were laid for the entertainment of the thousands of visitors. What is more to the point, those plans were carried out practically without a hitch.

Gotham Gulpd the Gathering
It must be said, first, that New York literally swallowed the convention. Save for the decorations on streets and buildings and the crowds in the vicinity of the Madison Square Garden, one would scarcely have thought anything unusual was going on. Oh, yes, there was also the unwonted concentration of police at strategic points, but those guardians of the peace had been instructed by the city authorities to devote themselves to the task of insuring the safety and comfort of the visitors, and they obeyed in a way that called forth unstinted praise. The lobbies of the great hotels were fairly crowded at times, but so they are always. The transportation lines of all kinds operated as usual and took care of the throngs as usual. Yet there were probably 150,000 persons added temporarily to the city's population on account of the convention. They were simply absorbed by the metropolis. Reverting to the hotels—there lay one little bit of disappointment for the guests from far away. The "haughty upper classes" declined to put themselves on display with their "wicked demitasses." For the most part they got out of the city to their country residences and country clubs and stayed there until the hosts of the untried had departed. But there was enough to see and do without them.

TAXES and rising costs haven't yet robbed the BEECH-NUT Chewing Tobacco of quality and quantity. Just as much and just as good in 1924 as in 1915.

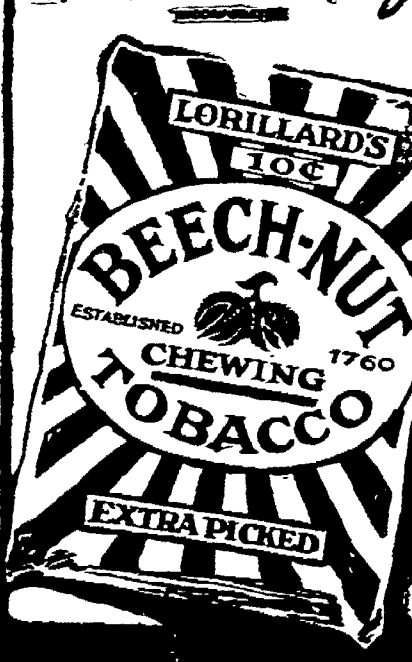

Recent years of higher revenue, State and Federal taxes, mounting labor and raw material costs, we've kept BEECH-NUT tight sealed against a reduction in weight and a rise in price.

Still the best and the most best chewing tobacco 10c. ever bought.

That's why sales exceed 250 million packages annually. That's why every third tobacco chewer in America tentatively protests against any substitute.

Make your 10c. do its duty too.
